

Margaret "Margie" A. (Thompson) (Jones) Elliott
September 28, 1938 - September 17, 2008

Surrounded by her beloved husband Don, daughter Jill and son Devon, loving goodbyes were said as our dear Margie passed into heaven after a courageous two-year battle with cancer. A beautiful lady who touched so many more deeply than she ever knew, Margie is remembered as one who gave of herself in every way to make those around her feel their world was brighter, richer and better than before she entered it. She accomplished this with a level of humility and grace rarely seen in this world. Margie is not one to be forgotten, and the empty space left by her passing grows by the hour.

Born in Detroit, she lived her young life as a military child in many states, including post-WWII occupied Japan and the Philippines. Her parents settled in San Diego, and after attending a different high school every year, she graduated from El Cajon High in 1956, went to San Diego State University and remained a resident of California -- calling San Diego, Sierra Madre and San Francisco home. Margie lived a very full and rewarding life. She was not only a devoted wife and mother, but she traveled the world with her "best friend" Don, made friends wherever she went, and opened her home and heart to many. She was active in all that she did - - as a member of Temple Baptist Church, Forest Hill Garden Club and Book Club - - and in her many activities, which included sailing the Bay, spending summers at "Grindstone Joe's" in the Delta and enjoying festive gatherings with the "Poni Streeters." The joy she brought to the many who knew her is immeasurable and we feel honored to have known and loved her.

Margie is survived by her husband Don of San Francisco; brother Tommy Thompson of Houston; daughter Jill Baker of San Diego; son CAPT. Devon Jones, USN, of Virginia Beach; step-daughters Jay Elliott, of San Francisco and Lisa Harding of Pleasanton; and ten grandchildren.

The family is grateful to the Kaiser Hospice staff for their outstanding care and support. In lieu of flowers, please consider a donation to the Kaiser Hospice Department, 4131 Geary Blvd., San Francisco, CA, 94118.
